III International Symposium on the History of Asia

On oceanic routes: "the Seas" of Asia

After having concluded the cycle of commemorations of Magellan and Elcano's circumnavigation voyage, in 2022, the Academia de Marinha, through its Maritime History Class, is currently organising the III International Symposium on the History of Asia, which will take place next November, in Lisbon.

The aim is to begin a two-year cycle, in which we will discuss one of the key subjects of current historiography: the History of the Oceans. Hence, considering the oceans as the core of knowledge construction and human development networks, this III International Symposium on the History of Asia: On Ocean Routes: the "Seas" of Asia, will address the following topics:

- The spice trade routes;
- The art of navigation;
- Cultural and technological interactions;
- Social and political-military impacts.

We welcome submissions, which must include title and abstract (up to 1700 characters without spaces), as well as a brief biographical note (15 lines) until June 15, 2023.

Notification of acceptance: July 15, 2023.
